Pushkin greatly appreciated the fact that more than 2,200 students, employees, and apprentices belonging to the CDU/Ost had volunteered for a two-year term of service with the KVP. As a matter of fact, however, the young people involved had not volunteered for the KVP but had joined under pressure. This is illustrated by the fact that no university student may pass his final examination and no high school student is allowed to study at a university unless he has volunteered for a two-year term of service with the KVP. No final decision has yet been taken if the term of service for high school and university students can be reduced to one year. SED circles rejected special privileges after the fashion of the system in force for the Imperial German Army. It was pointed out that, however, that of the high school and university students in the GDR were of worker and farmer stock. It was, believed probable, therefore that a one-year term of service would be set for the high school and university students who have to undergo a long professional training. The tendency of the present recruitment campaign is to avoid the necessity of introducing universal military service by increasing, if need be by ~~increasing~~, the number of volunteers for the KVP.
